

COPYRIGHT POLICY FOR PRESERVATION & ACCESS

University at Albany Libraries

The University at Albany Libraries are committed to the preservation of its collections. The primary means of reformatting to preserve at-risk items is digitization; additional methods include photocopying and microfilming.

We respect U.S. Copyright Law and abide by guidelines set forth by the Association of Research Libraries (ARL), which states:

It is fair use to make digital copies of collection items that are likely to deteriorate, or that exist only in difficult to access formats, for purposes of preservation, and to make those copies available as surrogates for fragile or otherwise inaccessible materials.<sup>i</sup>

Preservation takes technological steps to limit further redistribution. Irreparable monographs that have been digitized are only available online via a secure portal accessible to authenticated users of the University at Albany community.
